Judicial Ticket. For Associate Justice of the Supreme Court-WILLIAM P. LYON.

The bulls in Milwaukee have thus early begun a wail about wheat being badly hurt during the winter. They start these reports for the sake of driving up the price. It will be remembered that they have tried this sharper's game every spring for a long time.

The papers are giving Assemblyman MacBride, of Clark county, some handsome compliments because he is opposed to the democratic idea of low license, He is democratic, but unlike his party, he believes in putting the license up where it belongs. The Gazette joins in complimenting Mr. MacBride for the position he has taken.

Within two years Wisconsin has los four of its most conspicuous public men Matt Carpenter died on the 25th of Feb ruary, 1881; ex-Governor C. C. Washburn, died May 14, 1882; ex-Governor William E. Smith died February 13, 1883; and Postmaster General Howe, died yesterday. The three first died in the prime of manhood, and Judge Howe at 66.

The new two-cent stamp for first class matter, which will be used on and after the 1st of next October, will contain the vignette of Washington, with a neat border, instead of a picture of General Grant. The latter had jobjected to his likeness being used, not only on this, but a previous occasion, when the late Marshall Jewell desired to use his vignette on the five-cent stamp. This is a good illustration of Graut's modesty, and is fully in keeping with his career ever since fame was showered upon him. There is a growing sentiment that no picture of any public man living should appear on the stamps, bonds or bills, issued by the gov- pointed him a member of

The condition of Secretary Folger, of the treasury, is not altogether hopeful. He is not only out of health but he is likewise out of humor. Disappointment has really more to do with his present condition than all the colds he has taken during the winter. He threw away a life position as chief justice of the supreme court of New York, at a salary of ten thousand a year, to dabble in politics, with the hope that the secretaryship of the treasury would be a passport to the gubernatorial chair of his state. He has lost all, and this causes him much tronble of mind. His life shows that those we are apt to call great men have their weaknesses like those who plod along almost unnoticed in the humbler walks of life.

THE LEGISLATIVE COMMITTE AND THE INSANE.

Coming down to a question of common sense and wise economy, what benefit is it to the insane to expend five times the amount per capita at the northern hospital, that is expended on the insane in the respuns in Dane and Rock counties, where there is no essential difference in the treatment of the chronic insane—Janes—title Gazette.

In this the Gazette assumes as true two things, to-wit. That the cure of the insane in the northern hospital at Oshkosh costs five times as much county asylums of Dane and Rock counties, and that there is no essential difference in the treatment of patients in state and county institutions. Now, these statements are true or false. No one can believe the Gazette would publish them as true knowing them to be false; but it may have been misled, as all the information within reach of the Evening Wisconsin shows they are not true. Our Janesville contemporary has cast a slur upon the largest, if not the best-managed charitable institutions in the state, without giving any proof in substantiation of its charges.—Evening Wisconsin.

The Gazette does not intend to cast a slur upon the management of either of the state hospitals for the insane. In years gone by their management was doubtless extravagant and deserved criticism, but under the supervision of the board of control, a change for the better has taken place, and we are glad of it. The Gazette had a right to presume that the majority repert of the legislative committee on charitable and penal institutions was true in the main; and it had a right to further presume that the state board of charities and reform knew something worth consideration in regard to the character of the county asylums. But if the majority report of the legislative committee is made up of gross misrepresentations and were made for the purpose of misleading the public; and if the state board of charities and reform is not competent of 1798, and which the republican caucus to pass an opinion as to the management of the state or county asylums for the insane, then the Gazetto promptly recalls everything that it has said in commendation of the reports of the committee bearing upon the treatment of the insanc in this state. But how is the public to know whether the legislative committee is lying or not? Who shall be the judge? We repeat what we said the other day, that it the committee has been giving the public falsehoods instead of facts, that committee should be made to answer for the wrong.

Arkanisas' Quarter-Million Deficit. LATTLE ROCK, March 26 .- The state senate committee nearly two years ago began an investigation of the accounts of ex-State Treasurer Churchill, then governor, who had served as treasurer six years, or three terms. The committee spent a year on the accounts, and reported a deficit of 9114,000. When the legislature met in January last the house refused to accopt the report, saying the law required an investigation by a joint committee. Finally a joint committee was appointed and the work began anew. A final report has been made, which sharges a deficit, according to the face of the books, of $233,000.87. The difference in the two reports causes much comment. The legislature adjourns Wednesday, but will order suit brought and will bring the matter at

THE DEATH OF POSTMASTER GENERAL

The public will be greatly shocked to learn that Postmaster General Timothy

O. Howe, died at Kenosha on Sunday afternoon. This sad news will be received with surprise because it was not generally known that he was sick. While at Green Bay about a week ago he took a severe cold, but went to Kenosha to visit his nephew Colonel James H. Howe, and while there the cold resulted in pneumonia. He sank rapidly, with little hope of recovering until Saturday, when his symptoms were much improved; but late Saturday night he suffered a relapse, and died on Sunday afternoon at 2:20. A brief biograpical sketch of Judge Howe is herewith presented tothe readers of the Gazette: He was born at Livermore, Maine, February 24, 1816, and after receiving an academic education, studied law and was admitted to the bar. He was a member of the legislature of the state of Main, in 1845, in the latter part of which year he removed to Wisconsin, where he was elected a judge of the circuit and supreme courts in 1850, and resigned in 1855. He was elected to the United States senate as a Union republican, to succeed Charles Durkee, and took his seat in 1861. He was re-elected to the senate in 1867 and 1873, during these eighteen years holding important committee positions, and being one of the most prominent and influential members of that body. His term of office expired March 3d, 1879, and then occurred the famous triangular contest for his place, in which he, and Mr. E. W. Keyes and the Hon. Matt Carpenter were the participants. Mr. Carpenter was elected, and Judge Howe retired to Green Bay where he had lived for more than 35 years. Two years after his defeat for the senate, President Garfield apthe board of commissioners sent by the United States to represent this government in the international monetary congress at Paris, his associates being ex-Senator Thurman, of Ohio, and William M. Evarts, of New York. They remained abroad about six months, and, soon after his return, began to be prominently mentioned as a possible member of President Arthur's cabinet. In December, 1881, he was tendered the postmaster generalship, which he accepted, and to the duties of which he had since devoted his attention. The eighteen years which Judge Howe spent in the United States senate served to give him a national reputation. He was conspicuous in influence and in debate, and during the war he was one of the most patriotic and courageous republican leader in that body. He was a strong man during the time when strong men were needed in congress, and Wisconsin had occasion to feel proud of the character, ability and influence of her senator—T. O. Howe. It was hoped that the public confidence he gained and the popularity he had so justly won, would stay by him to the end of contracted by walking half a mile through a senatorial career, but he his was not so fortunate. He was not in full sympathy with the administration of President Hayes, and on the 25 of March, 1878, he made a speech in the senate # in which he bitterly and unjustly attacked not only the administration, but the president personally. This attack grew out of a resolution which Judge Howe offered in the senate, requesting the president to furnish the senate with certain information regarding the official character of W. R. Whittaker, who had recently presided in the superior criminal coart of the parish of Orleans. We have just been looking over that speech and are still firmly convinced that the criticism the Gazette made of the speech was in keeping with justice and honorable criticism. There was too much personal feeling in the speech to give it much force, and therefore it was generally condemned by the press and the people. From that day his popularity begen to wane, and the year following brought his defeat for Judge Howe was a man of unflinching integrity, and in many things was sternly independent. He could not be seduced by flattery, neither could be be bought by promises. He could have gone to the United States senate in 1857 if he had given a promise to support the state sovereignty resclutions of the Kentucky legislature at Madison had approved, but he didn't believe in them and rather than endorse them he turned his back on the sonate. President Grant offered him the chief justiceship of the supreme court, but at that time his resignation as sonator would have put a democrat in his place, and thus to serve his party well, he threw away the highest judicial office in America; and for this reason it is said he once refused the mission to the court of St. James. These facts show what manner of a man he was. He made mistakes as all other mortals do, but he was a faithful public servant, nevertheless, and his death will be deeply mourned by the people of Wisconsin. Judge Howe's wife died two years ago, and the only surviving relatives are a son Frank, chief clerk of the postoffice department at Washington, a daughter, Mrs-Totten, wife of Colonel E. Totten, of Washington; his nephew, Colonel James H. Howe, and niece, Miss Grace Howe of Kenosha. His estate is supposed to be worth about $60,000.

OBITUARY.

Sudden Demise of Postmaster General Howe at Kenosha, Wis.

The Cause of Death Attributed by the Physicians to Pneumonia.

The Fatal Malady Contracted While Visiting at His Old Home in Greén Bay.

KENOSHA, Wis., March 26.—This community was shocked by the unexpected announcement of the death of Hon. T. O. Howe, postmaster general, which occurred at the residence of his nephew, Col. J. H. Howe, in this city, at half-past 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Judge Howe arrived in this city from Washington two weeks ago last Thursday in exceltent health. After remaining a few days he wout to Green Bay, his old home, and spent a week there visiting old friends and attending to private business. Last Sunday he took a long walk through the heavy snow-storm which prevailed broughout the northwest and contracted a severe cold. He returned to this city on Monday feeling slightly indisposed and remained in his room, though not confined to his bed until Thursday, when he was taken worse. Dr. Isham, of Chicago, was summoned and Dr. Saunders, of this city, also attended. The case was not thought sericus, however, and the patient apparently commenced to improve at once. He had some fever Thursday night, but on Friday was feeling comfortable, and it was thought unnecessary to create any alarm on the part of his friends by announcing his illness. He spent a comfortable night on Friday night, and Saturday morning was feeling much better-so much so that under advise of his physiciaus, Col. J. H. Howe telegraphed the son of the postmaster general, that it would be unnecessary for him to come to Wisconsin. He continued feeling better all day Saturday, and, unler the advise of his physicians, Col. Howe telegraphed again at night that he made very decided improvement during the day. At no time, in fact, had he been though dangerous, and all anxiety had been dispelled by his improved condition; but about 11 o'clock Saturday night he was taken worse again. The absent members of the family were then telegraphed to come immediately. Mr. Howe continued to decline until half-past 2 in the afternoon, when he quietly passed away without seeming to suffer any pain. He was in full possession of all his faculties up to 10 o'clock Sunday morning, after which time he became flighty at intervals, but recognized his friends up to the time of his death. His daughter arrived from Washington at 11 o'clock Sunday, having started in advance of the summons to come. He made no mention of his death, and said nothing with referonce to business matters. He will be buried at Green Bay, in the family spot, by the side of his wife. No further arrangements have been made concerning the funeral services. His son and son-in-law are expected here on Tuesday morning.

Another Account.

KENOSHA, Wis., March 26.-Mr. Howe's illness was the result of a severe cold bad storm at Green Bay a week ago, which on his arrival at Kenosha on Monday developed into pneumonia. Saturday night a change for the worse was noticeable in Mr. Howe's condition, and the absent elembers of the family were sent for, his daughter arriving from Washington at 11 o'clock. Up to that hour ho was conscious, but his mind after that wandered, and at 2:20 he passed away without a struggle. The funeral will take place at Green Bay, but no arrangements have yet been mada

Howe, of Kenesha.

A Terrible Shock to All, Washington, March 26 .- "Frank, your father is doad," It was in this cruel manuer that a comparative stranger informed young Mr. Howe yesterday upon the street that his father was no more. The shock which the son received was scarcely greater than that felt by the entire community last evening when it became known, and the surprise was less for dispatches which had been received by members of the family during the day pre-pared them for a fatal termination of Judge Howe's illness. Assisstant Postmaster-General Hatton, early in the afternoon, received a dispatch from Kenesha indicating that Judge Howe's illness had become of a more alarming character. He immediately dispatched a messenger to the president and to the house of Judge Howe. This messenger had hardly left when another dispatch came indicating still more alarming conditions, and soon after came the news of his death. The death of the postmaster-general, outside of his immediate family, will bring sincere grief to no one more than the president of the United States and to the remaining members of his cabinot And to Judge Folger, who is himself lying upon a bed of pain, the news, when his physicians permit it to be broken to him, will be a terrible shock. They were nearly of the same age, their habits were judicial, and, though comparative strangers before they had entered the cabinet their relations had become of the most cordial character. The president had learned to look upon Judge Howe as one of the most trusted of his counsalors, and, while the postmaster-general seldom volunteered opinions, there wes no one about the executive council chamber to whom the president more readily turned for engrestions, than to the late postmaster general President Arthur was minute.

much affected by the death of Gen. Garfield; he was much shocked by the death in the White House on last New Year's day, of the Hawaiian minister, Judge Allen he was more shocked when the news came that Judge Howe was dead. It is very probable that, in view of this death, the president will forego his expected pleasure trip to Florida. To gentlemen who conversed with the president last evening upon the death of Judge Howe, Gen. Arthur spoke of him in the highest

Frank Hutton toft the cabinot officers at their homes, and himself very narrowly escaped death on returning, the livery horses attached to the coupe becoming excited and running with the carriage for nearly two miles over the smooth payements before they could be stopped. Mr. Hatton, speaking of the death of Judge Howe, said he felt as if he had lost a father. The loss was to him a personal one, and he said that he did not feel that, shocked as he had been by the news, he could give adequate expression to his sense of loss. Of Judge Howe in his capacity as an excentive officer Mr. Halton spoke in the highest terms. He said he doubted whether an officer had yet been in that department who had taken such pains to familiarize himself with every detail, and who know so much about every branch of the public service. His method of work was peculiar. It was quite undemonstrative, but it was thorough, and the questions which he asked of all of his subordinates indicated that he had become master of the subjects which came under his important supervision, and the subordinates themselves soon learned that their chief was not to be satisfied with superficial knowl-

At the Capital.

WASHINGTON, March 26 .- First Assistance Postmaster General Hatton called at the White House yesterday evening and had an interview with the president, at which it was decided to issue an executive order closing the department on the day of the funeral. The postoffice department building will be draped with mourning for the customary period. Mr. Howe's death has been looked for by the higher officials of the postoffice department sinco Wednesday, but they have been careful not to say publicly that they know how serious the case of Mr. Howe was. They did not desire to set affoat any such amount of gossip and speculation, as the treasury department is responsible for in connection with Secrotary Folger. Of course all the officials in the department are very anxious to know who will succeed, but one of the highest of them states that he did not believe anyone had the means of making even an intelligent guess as to whom the president would appoint Naturally enough Mr. Frank Hatton's name is again mentionen in connection with the place, but it is not deamed at all probable that Mr. Hatton will be promoted.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

National Bank Circulation Not Likely to be Diminished --- Treasury Troubles .- Butler's Accounts.

Washington, March 24.-Frequent inquiries are made here by business men as to a probable diminution of the national bank circulation. Mr. John J. Knox, the controller of the currency, recently replied to a query of this kind made by a bank president. Mr. Knox wrote:

"I have received your letter of the 8th inst. in reference to the probability of a large reduction in the circulation of the national banks since the passage of the act of March 3 National banks may deposit lawful money and take up their bonds in amounts not greater than $3,000,000 per month. The prohibition of $3,000,000 a month does not, however, apply to deposits made for the purpose of withdrawing called bonds. Sec. 6 of the act of July l 1882, contemplates the redemption of their circulation of banks whose corporate existence has been extended, and requires such banks at the end of three years from the date of the extension to deposit lawful money for the purpose of redeeming the remainder of their circulation. Such notes may be replaced with notes of new designs, or bonds may be withdrawn, not below the minimum amount provided by law. There were $54,000,000 of 31/4 per cent, bonds outstanding on March 1, 1880, of which the national banks hold only about $14,000,000, and there are outstanding $297, 000,000 of 3s, of which the banks hold $198, 000,000. Much the greater part-I should estimate nearly three-quarters—of the S per cent. bonds held by the bonds are among the first bonds issued. The payment of bonds during the next year will not, therefore, affect the securities held by national banks to a great ex-

Butler's Accounts.

In relation to the published statement that a deficiency of $15,000 has been discovered in the accounts for the Soldiers' National home for the period while Gen, Benjamin F. Butler was president, the latter says that he once received a certificate of the full adjustment of his accounts, and he has not been notified of any change in this; that whonever any domand is made upon him, if the claim is a just one, he will pay it; if not a just one he will allow it to be sued upon. He added that the home had a bond of $100,000 to make any deficiency good.

Folger. Secretary Folgor's physician reports at a late hour last night that the condition of his patient is improved. It is true that the secretary is suffering from erysipelas in the face and head, brought on by a severe cold. The disease is aggravated by lowered vitality and the impoverished condition of the blood, due to overwork and want of proper nutrition, but it is not thought there is as yet any reason for especial apprehension.

The Dead Song-Writer. The remains of John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet Home," arrived in this city Saturday morning. W. W. Corcoran, C. M. Mathews, and Lieut. Nicholson accompanion the remains to Oak Hill cometery, and saw them placed in the chapel. The coffin will be exposed to view in the chapel, where it will probably remain for some days before being removed to the vault. It is said the lawn facing the entrance is being thought of at the place of interment. A monument a this point would be very conspicuous.

A VILLAGE HORROR. Two Rad Boys Engage in a Quarrel---

A Bystander Kills the Boy and Mortally Wounds the Boy's Father. VINCENNES, Ind., March 26 .- Alfords-ville, Daviess county, was thrown into a tumult of confusion by a lamentable tragedy which was cuacted in that villago Friday. John Bingham, aged 17, and Cooney Walls, aged 14, became involved in a youthful scrimmage in front of the village post office. Dr. Bingham, the father of the 17 year old youth, interfered. The Walls boy retorted, where upon both Dr. Bingham and his son John abused the boy. At this stage James S. Gould a bystander, stepped up and interfered. Dr. Bingham and two sons, turned upon Gould and attacked him, driving him into the street.

Gould retreated gradually; then suddenly drew an old knife from his pocket and commenced striking right and left at his assailants. He stabbed John Bingham in the region of the heart, who, falling prostrate on his face in the middle of the street, died in less than five minutes. Dr. Bingham was stabbed in the abdomen, in the breast and his left cheek frightfully cut. Orville Bingbam escaped uninjured. The dead body of John Bingham was conveyed to the home of the deceased, where the most beartrending scenes occurred. Dr. Bingham succeeded in reaching his residence just after the dead body of his unfortunate son arrived there, but fell from exhaustion on the floor. Physicians were called in and his wounds procounced mortal.

Gould walked quietly to the residence of the justice of the peace and gave himself up. After hearing the details of the affair the squire denominated it homicide and placed young Gould under $3,000 bonds, which he readily gave.

Nearly a Thousand Invitations Have Been-Accepted.

The Lavish Expenditures .- Counting the Cost ... A Runaway Match.

NEW YORK, March 26.—The greatest social event of the coming month here is undoudtedly Mrs. William E. Vanderbilvs fancy-dress ball, to come on this evening. It will be far the largest ball given this winter at a private house, and the finest given for ten years. The last great fancy-dress ball was in 1872 or 1873, and was given by Mrs. Astor at Delmonico's, then on the corner of Fifth avenue and Fourteenth street. It cost $45,000 and was a suporb affair. The girls who participated are now blooming matrons, and their children inspect the albums filled with photographs of their mothers dressed "in char-

Some twelve hundred invitations are out for the ball, of which more than nine hundred have been accepted. No more invitations for ladies can be had, as most of those invited have accepted; but nearly a hundred gentlemon have sent regrets, and their places must be filled. The backwardness of the young men results from the expense attending the luxury of a fancy dress-costumes for gentlemen costing from $100 to $500 apieco-which good many honored with Mrs. Vanderbilt's smiles are not able to afford. There will be about one thousand persons at the ball, it is estimated, and the total expense of the affair will be $75,000 to $85,000. The flowers alone will cost $19,000-a surprisingly large considering the fact that the grand staircase and the walls of mansion are ornately carved and already sufficiently adorned. There will be room for flowers around the newel-post and rail, the fountsine, and the windows, and several huge and elaborate jardinieres of Persian manufacture will overflow with costly blooms in the drawing-rooms and ball-room. Most of the roses are imported from the tropics, and from Spain, Algiers, and other lands, expressly for the ball, being sent when nearly matured and started in bloom in a hot-house on the ship. The musicians will be concealed in a lovely bower of palms and Bon Silene and Mermet roses. The banquet-room will be finely decorated. The supper will be pro vided by the Vanderbilt "corps of cooks," instead of a professional cateror, and the Vanderbilt "staff of waiters" will serve the guests. The costumes will be magnificent and will run through the whole spectacular gamut, exhibiting the duchesses, gypsies, pirates, and peasants of every land, and the picturesque personages of romance and fiction.

Apparently the socialistic programme of bomb throwing no longer cuts any figure in the minds of upper-tendom. On the contrary popular expectation runs so high in regard to the ball that it has even been rumored that a runaway marriage between a gentleman and lady as well known to (ashionable circles as are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pell will take place from it.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.

Williams Sewing Machine Work-Burned--- Lose $200,000,

MONTREAL, March 26.—The most destructive fire that has occured in this neighborhood for two yours past took place early yesterday morning in Williams' sewing machine factory at St. Cunegonde village, outside the city. The fire brigade was on the agot promptly, but, as only one stream could be had, its services were practically useless. The flames spread to all parts of the huge factory, the largest of the kind in the dominion without an effort to stop them: The whole interior, with its splendid machinery, was reduced to ashes, the iron having melted down rapidly. The brick walls are in such unsafe condition that they must come down. The total loss, is costimated at over $300,000, nearly covered by insurance. The business was first started here a great many years ago in a small way by an American from Massachusette, whose name the factory still boars. It was purchased from him by a company, with the late Sir Hugh Allan at its head, and whose son is now prosident. About three hundred mechanics, for whom houses were erected and who received high wages, are temporarily deprived of engagements, and, as the factory has been marvelously profitable to share-holders since national policy practically excluded American machinery, there is no doubt rebuilding will be commenced immediately. The company also has a factory in

He Speaks of the Growing Troubles In England and Treland

An Interesting Review of the History of Ireland's Sufferings and Grievances.

CHICAGO, March 26.—A reporter has interviewed Patrick Egan, treasurer of the rish Land league tund, and one of the lead. ng agitators, who is now stopping in the city. Mr. Egan is a man about 42 years of age. He wears a full chin whisker, neatly trimmed, with mustache and hair of the same color, the latter being slightly tinged with gray. His appearance is unassuming, and apparently he is of a modest and retiring disposition. He is of medium height, dresses in plain dark clothes, and looks withat like the ordinary man of business which he is, being a member of the flour and baking firm of Egan & Rourke, of Iroland, and a director of the Dublin North City Milling company. "What have you to say with reference to the trial now going on of the alleged, assassins of Lord Cavendish?" "The general impression in Ireland is that the government is determined, that these men who are charged with the crime shall not have fair play; that it is vengeance the government seeks, and not justice. All the recognized rules in regard to identification and the reception of evidence have been flagrantly set aside, and the crown case is being built up on the evidence of persons who are bribed, in some cases to the extent of perjury."

"What is there in the reports that the Land league were cognizant of, if not aiders and abettors of, assassination?"

"My best answer to that question is, that in 1880, when the Land league was practically the government of Ireland, only eight murders were committed, but three of which were considered agrarian or political, while during the year 1881, when coercion was introduced and the power of the Land league crippled, the murders increased, and assaults and agrarian offensos of every character prevailed .. The Land league always taught their people to confine themselves solely to the process of boycotting, which simply moans to let objectionable individuals severely alone. When this system was broken down, and the power of regular organizations destroyed, each individunl who considered himself aggrieved took the sottlement of his differences into his own hands. I do not believe that the murders which have eccurred throughout the country were in any sense the work of any regular organizatiou.'

"What action will you bring to bear on Irish affairs while you are in America?"

"I have a twofold purpose in coming to this country. It is partly commercial and partly political. My object politically, is to consult with the leaders of the various branches of the national movement with a view to bringing about greater harmout than has yet prevailed?

"What has the Land league accomplished for

"When the movement was started in 1879 the country was suffering from the defects of two bud harvests and the certainty of a third. All hose dependent upon agriculture, owing to the enormous increase of rents put on by the handlords during the good years from 1970 to 1876, were destitute of any reasure. They had no prospects before them but famine, the poor house, or emigration. The system of rackrenting was so arranged as to extract from the temant all the surples of his labore over and above the cost of bure existence; in fact, the tenants had been treated by the landlords as mere rent-making machines." "What offeet has the land bill had on the peoole."

"The bill was so hedged around with clauses, provisions introduced by landlords in the house of commons and afterward in the house of lords, that some of the most serious grievances of the people are not touched at all. For instance, in a very great number of cases, when andlords had screwed up the rents during good seasons, they compelled tenants under the threat of eviction to accept long terms at exorbitant rents. Such cases are excluded from the scope of the bill. The most important provision of the bill, the one introduced by Mr. Healy, M. P. for Wexford, and now known as the Healy clause, under which it is provided that the land courts in fixing routs shall not assess rent on any improvements created by the tenant or his predecessor in title, has been most shamefully set aside by the commissioners. Honce the bitter discentent that is now so rapidly growing among the Orange and Presbyterian tenant farmers of the porth of Ireland. In Ireland all improvements have been made by tenants, such as building, damming, fencing, etc., and they maintain very reasonably that the landlords are only entitled to what Mr. Parnell called the prairie value of the land, the raw material, while the landlords claim that the whole of the improvements made by the tenants up to 1870, and a great portion made since has passed into the landlord's possession. The land act leaves untouched the crying evils arising from the drain of absentee landlords of between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000 per year, and again, a very large proportion of the former tenants are excluded from the benefits; owing to the fact that, they are in arrears. They have gotton into the land act would prevent eviction, yet the number of evictions last year were 5,201 familice, or 26,836 persons." "What have you accomplished by agitation?" "While the land act has failed in very maxy secutiale to most the just requirements of the country, it has worked out considerable of a reduction in rents. It is estimated by the land commissioner: that between reductions in ronts, brought about by mutual arrangements between landlords and tenants out of court, and the reduction that would have been made by the court before closing its labors, $20,000,000 was knocked off the rental of Ireland. That sum capitalized at twenty to twenty-five years purchase will give a gain to the country equal to four hundred or five hundred million dellars. In addition to this, the landlords of Ireland, who are the most improvident set and are steaped in bankruptcy have their cestates mortgaged on an average to the extent of twothirds of the value. Owing to successions of bad seasons and the agitation together the rents in many cases were not paid. Interest accumulating at penal rates makes the creditors auxious for a favorable opportunity to sell. When things begin to look a little more settled, hundreds of these proporties will be brought into market, and this will give the tenants a chance of acquiring the ownership of farms on fair terms. From the experience of the past few years few people would care to bid against the occupancy of tenants whenever they show a disposition to buy.

THE DIAMOND SHAFT.

Progress of the Work of Recovery... Scenes at the Morgue. BRAIDWOOD, Ill., March 26.

The excitement at the Diamond shaft is intense. A Chicago correspondent, who descended the main shart yesterday, and theroughly explored every accessible part of it, gives the following account of his observations About one foot of water yet romains in the bot tom. On reaching it the first thing in view was four canyas stretchers elevated above the water, and each containing the ghastly remains of one of the unfortunate victims. The condition of the bodies is much better than would be naturally expected after thirty-eight days immersion. Three of the four were clothed in their usual mining suits, and the fourth with merely an undershirt and pants supported by a belt. About twenty-five yards further a number of heroic miners were engaged in removing a heavy fall of rock from the body of a fifth victim. The poor fellow lay upon his face, with only his head projecting from beneath the rocky mass. After removing this fall and the body, progress was made some fifty yards further, and a fall which blocked the entire roadway was encountered. It probably weighed a hundred tons.

The hoisting of the bodies was to begin on the arrival of the Will county coroner at midnight. At the morgue, which is midway between the hoising shaft and the escapement shaft all is activity. Coffins stand on end in one end of the room, and a strong odor of disinfectuats pervades the place. Anxious faces, white and black, peer through the windows at the scone of preparation, and workmen are busy providing materials for any emergency that may be anticipated or suggested. The working force comprises about one hundred picked men, and those in the mine work in three-hour reliefs, fourteen men at each shaft. The force represents every company in this coal-field.

Court House Burned.

St. Paul March 26.—The Richland county court house was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The flames were discovered issuing from the court room about 2 o'clock, and probably originated through a lighted eigar being dropped some time before or after the night session at night in the sawdust that covered the floor. The building was a two-story brick, veneered, with county offices on the ground floor, court and jury rooms upstairs, and jail and sheriff's dwelling connected in the roar. It was built in 1882, and cost $10,000. Court adjourned about 8:30, and all the papers used during the term in charge of the clork are destroyed, as they were still in the court-room. All the county records were in the fire-proof vaults, and it is thought they will be uninjured. Smith, the only prisoner, was liberated by the sheriff, and labored to extinguish the flames.

But that they mirror (though imperfectly)
My passions flerce and fell:

Not that I ever level you have I told Your praise, O infinite Sky; but that in thic, Perchance, as in a glass, I might behold My soul's immensity!

And thou, O Earth-what are thy shricks of woor Thy dissonant cries, thy murmurs of alarm, Thy curses, but an echo, faint and low, That makes more sweet my calm?

Earth, heaven, and the watery wilderness!
In all your mighty volume I can see

EMMELINE'S GOSLINGS.

They were six green, fuzzy little things, made motherless by the acci-dental crushing of their maternal parent under the feet of a frisky colt, allowed thoroam at large. Their forlorn condi-tion appealed strongly to the sympa-thies of little Emmoline Lang, a child who lived, loved and flourished many years ago, before the advent of the bright magazines and papers for children, that have sprung up on every side, to make glad the hearts of our young people. Toys, too, were scarce, comparatively, and of little variety, and juvenile books were scarcer still, even in our large cities:

Emmeline lived on a farm, in a mount-ainous district, away from steamboat and railroad communication.

If she had seen either unexpectedly. she would, no doubt, have been frightened, more frightened than to meet a bear among her native hills.

It was a severely quiet, solemn region, over-shadowed by old Whiteface, the grandest peak of the Adirondack range. Amid this sublimity of scenery, Emmeline played keep house with rag dolls and broken bits of crockery and glass, and was happy and contented. Beside these inanimate pleasures she took a tender interest in young calves, lambs, fowls. pupples and kittens. Among all her pets she never held any so dear to her simple. so dear to her simple, loving heart as these goslings given to her care. It was her delight to feed them with yellow corn meal, to take thorn out in the yard and lane, and watch them nip the tender green grass, and listen to their cooing, bird-like notes. They came to love her with all their gosling hearts, and as they grew stronger they followed her wherever she went, unless she stole away unsecn.

She enjoyed this sometimes; at others it was an annoyance, as they occasionally proved inconvenient companions. They followed her when she went strawherrying, till a fence obstructed their way, when they would sit down and await her return. They emulated "Mary's lamb," and went after her to school, which was but a short distance from her home. For some unexplained reason they did not attempt to enter the school-room, but on the grass they patiently fed about till Emmeline appeared, when they at once became her escorts.

This caused much merriment among her school-mates. Emmeline was not impervious to ridicule. When the boys, with the boys! love of teasing, called out:

"There is Emmeline and her family."
"Her shadow never falls alone on the grass.

She is the new Mother Goose. She was ready to cry with shame and vexation. She went straight to her father with her troubles.

Those hateful boys make fun of me, because I have been good to the poor little goslings, and the goslings love me for it. The boys call me Mother Goose. Do you think they ought, father? What if their mothers should die, and they had no one to take care of them." And her blue eyes looked indignation through tears.

Mr. Lang smiled, unobserved, as he regarded his small, roly-poly daughter.
"Never mind, dearie. I don't believe they laughed because you were good to the poor orphans. I'll own they are a little mean to plague you so, but boys will be boys. We'll fix it so they won't have a chance to laugh at you any more on account of your pets. The goslings shall have a yard of their own, where you can keep them penued, so they can not follow you when you don't wish them to.

And so it was soon arranged to her smiling satisfaction. The goslings appeared equally pleased with their snug quarters, as the yard, with its green grass and little pond of water, was all they could desire.

Their young mistress continued her daily watch and care of them, and they all throve apace. Their love for her was unabated, and they never failed to call after her in gosling dialect, until she was out of sight.

When Mr. Lang said he would fix things against the chance of a largh at her expense, he spoke according to faith and not to knowledge, as was proved a few weeks afterward. One bright Sab-bath marning two neighbories has bath morning two neighboring boys roaming about the fields, spied Emmeline and her father starting out for church, which was nearly a mile distant.
Say, Mark, said the taller one.

here is a chance for sport. Emmeline is dressed up to kill, white dress, new hat and new shoes. See how she holds her head and flirts her skirts." This was quite true; for good little church-going Emmeline had Eve's love of apparel, and couldn't quite hide her love of display. She was very like that bird of gaudy plumage that Sunday-school books warn us against imitating; and the sharp boy eyes had not been slow in discovering the fact. "That's so, Norman Lake. She is a

"Those goslings." "Well, how?"

"Let down a bar of their yard fence. stupid. Those handsome birds will follow her fast enough. They won't stay outside, I'll wager. "But it will be too bad to plague the good little thing somuch." "Mark, you are too soft-hearted. It is warm to day, and the people and the preacher will be sure to be drowsy, and it will rouse them. Don't you see we will be doing a good thing? reasoned the young mischief-maker. And so it happened, before Emmeline was quite out of sight, her pets were following after.

They had reached the most awkward stage of gosling-hood, and were, though so lovable to her, no longer lovely in appearance: Emmeline was quietly scated by her father. The opening church service had been gone through with. The grave minister was fairly launched in his discourse, when through the open church door, in single file, walked the six goslings, with gosling assurance and eagerness depicted on their faces and in their port. Their progress up the aisle was steady, till they came abreast of Mr. Lang's pew, when, after expressing their delight at finding her the best they could, they squatted down to await

"Quack-oo, quack-oo-bub-bub-"
We wish we could paint the funfypicture. Mr. Lang's amused but concerned physiognomy, poor Emmeline's tears and blushes, and mischievous smiles here and there. Emmeline was sure the people were dubbing her the new Mother Gcose. "Quack-oo, quack-oo-bub-bub-bub." At this outbreak there was a new shower from her blue eyes. However, she was the only one in tears.

The effect upon the audience and preacher was instantaneous, and quite contrary. After a vain attempt to maintain gravity, an audible smile went round. The oldest and gravest could not resist it. The minister broke into a laugh, and never finished his ser-

Poor Emmeline went home, vowing she would sell her pets, but afterward thought better of it, and they and their descendants furnished feather-beds and pillows for her wedding outfit a few years later on. She never knew of whom her goslings obtained permission to go to church till long afterward. It remained a mystery, till she was a grown-up woman, and one of the rogues interested in the episode confessed it to her on their wedding-day.

"And, Mark," laughed the rosy bride, you thought if I had so much affection for irrational creatures, I'd have some for a human gosling, eh?" "Yes," said Mark, "and I didn't dare tell you before, for fear you would refuse me, dear Mother Goose."-Bal-

A London Fog.

During five of the last seven days the city has been enswathed in a dark and palpable combination of mist and smoke which is known to the technical as a London fog. Business is be-numbed by it, and for several days vehicles have not been able to move in the streets. On Monday last a gentleman and his wife started from the Strand in a hansom cab to come to my house, a distance of three-and-a-half miles. Cab-drivers are supposed to know the city thoroughly, and they do. But my friends, after enduring the anxiety and extreme tension which necessarily accompanies moving in an almost opaque atmosphere for an hour, found them-selves on the bank of the Thames, near the Tower of London, having increased the distance to their destination two-and-a-half miles. Being near a cab-stand, they discharged this driver and employed another. After three hours of attempt to return to their hotel they drove against a red-light danger-signal, which was to protect migratory citizens against a deep excavation in the street. Fortunately the pole and lamps had been placed thirty feet from the pit, otherwise horse, and cab, and occupants would have had a slim chance of escaping death, for the light was not seen, so dense was the fog, until the horse ran against it. The cabman now refused to risk his life and that of his horse in attempting to move in any direction; said. he would make no charge for his services so far, which is the most conclusive possible evidence of his earnestness, and would tie his horse to the back of his vehicle until the fog lifted. Leaving him to his cheerless waiting, myfriends found near by a saloon, or, as it is known here, a "pub," which the same is an abbreviation of public house. They found that they were in Northwest London, far from their place or west house. At near the house of an acquaintance. Although the friend lived in the next street, they had to employ two men with torches to lead them, the mist being so dense that the torches had to be held so closely to the persons conducted that dropping embers rained the dress of the lady. Thus the befogged ones, after five hours of effort, neither got to my house nor to their own, and this, too, in the day-time. Several months ago there was formed a society of scientists who proposed to discover some means by v fog could be dissipated. Their efforts have not been attended by success as yet, nor have they given to the world any statements of the nature of their plans, or of the results obtained. Although I have always been able to make my way through its torturous streets and misleading alleys with safety, if not with ease, there is nothing short of dire necessity that would induce me to go cut of the house when London puts on her impenetrable veil.

The electric light has been found to be utterly useless, and the strong rays of a 50,000-candle power Brush lamp have lost their penetrative power and been dulled almost before they left the carbon. Looking out from the window as I write, across the narrow street, where there is usually a brilliantlylighted shop, or store as I should say in America, which frequently cast shad-ows into the room, although I know that a hundred gas-jots are shining there now, I can see nothing. It would be indeed a triumph for science and a blessing for London if the fogs could be made to disappear. I have said that business was benumbed, many branches of trade brought to an absolute standstill, omnibuses, trams (street cars), hackney-coaches and hansom cabs are withdrawn, the streets are deserted. and the silence of midnight rests upon the city at the hour when it is usually most active. At night the condition is even worse. The theaters are deserted; the restaurants and other places or public resort are without patrons, and the unfortunate way. farer, groping in the dark, rarely reaches his destination and frequently spends the night in the streets, not knowing where to turn or where to move in safety. On such a night the thieves take advantage of the darkness to break into the windows of jewelry stores and bag their contents, assured that e cape will be easily made. Instances are not rare of people being run over and killed in the streets by reason of the carelessness of drivers, who are forced to be out, through their inability to guard against such accidents. The mortnary statistics of London show that such fogs as this cost more lives than did the recent war in Egypt. Imagine if you can darkness shutting upon Cleveland at mid-day. a darkness so dense that street cars can not be run in Prospect street, and that one might be lost in making his way from the Kennard House to the Weddell House -out of whose thick veil would rise every now and then one crying out for help in a wilderness of intense darkness, and then you will have obtained some idea of the condition of London. to-day. —London Cor. Cleveland Herald.

-There were three funerals in the city yesterday, all in the afternoon. That of two o'clock, Rev. Mr. Davies officiating, and was largely attended by sympathizing friends; the remains were taken to Oak Hill for interment; that of the late C. A. Smith was held at the house in the third ward, Rev. O. A. Curtis, of the Court street M. E. church officiating, after the services the remains were taken to Oak Hill cemetery for burial. St. Mary's church was crowded at half-past two o'clock, by friends of the family of the late John K. Leech, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leech, to listen to the impressive funeral service and pay their last sud respects to the deceased. After the service at the church the remains were taken to the Catholic cemetery and tenderly laid —Yesterday, Messrs. O. Baker and

F. F. Pierson went down the river in a boat for the purpose, if possible, of finding the double barreled shot gun which Johnny Leech had with him on his illfated trip to Bass creek. A short distance above the mouth of Bass creek they found the boat, drawn up out of the water, and tied with a long rope. The surroundings indicated that young Leech left the boat where it was found, and proceeded on foot, to reach a house some half a mile distant. A short distance from where he left the boat, he was compelled to cross a little creek by walking on a board fence; here were found a bag with gun-shells, wet, evidently belonging to young Leech, and thown aways after being wet. He soon came to the railread embankment, and after crossing the track, it appears that he must have been exhausted, and laid down for rest. There was a house a few rods distance, which he evidently tried to reach, but there being a ditch or little creek intervening, prevented him in doing so. He was picked up early the next morning (having undoubtedly been out all night) by a couple of section men on the railroad, and taken to the depot, where he died in a few minutes. His satchel and gun could not be found. His clothing which he had on was wet to the waist, he having either been tipped over in the boat, or fell into the creek while attempting to cross it on the fence. This is probably all that will ever be known of the circumstances of his melancholy

'A Card of Thanks. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leech desire to thank their many friends for the practicat sympathy showed them in the hour of their sad affliction. Death came to their son under such terrible circumstances as to make the blow doubly sad, and the out-pouring of the public sympathy for them in their great bereavement, them with gratitude. The Opera House To-night. One of the greatest of our emotional actresses, Miss Jeffreys-Lewis, will appear in "La Belle Russe" this evening in Myers opera house. There is a power in her acting that holds the interest of the audience from beginning to end. Whatever opinion may be formed of the play, no one who hears it will doubt for a moment that Miss Lewis is a brilliant actress and a genius in impersonating the strange and difficult character which is the central figure in "La Belle Russe." There is great passion, deep pathos, and sparkling vivacity and applause for every act in the play. -

THE QUEEN OF RESTIVALS.

What wat done in Commemoration of Easter Day in Janesville.

Easter day, which came this year on the 25th of March, will not come so early again till the year 1913. It was within two days of being the earliest possible date on which Easter can come. When the question was fully settled by all christian churches, as to what rule should govern in fixing Easter day, it was agreed that the day should always be the first Sunday after the full moon which the late Mrs. Sophia Holmes was held at | happens upon or next after March 21. If the Congregational church at half-past the full moon Lappens on a Sanday, Easter is the Sunday after. By this arrangement Easter cannot come earlier than March 22d, nor later than April 25tb.

In consequence of the early date at which Easter came this year, and the lateness of the spring, the floral displays at the churches were not so large, varied, and handsome as on previous Easters. Still there were some very beautiful floral tributes to the day which the christian world has fittingly called the queen of social festivals. At the Congregational church the pastor, Rev. Mr. Davis, read the scripture lesson from the 21st chapter of John, and preached an able sermon appropriate to the occasion, taking his text from 6 Romans, 4th verse-"Therefore we are with him by baptism unto death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." The subject of the discourse being, "Uprising of the soul to newness of life." There was the usual music by the choir. The attendance was large...

No extra preparations were made in either of the Episcopal churches for the observances of Easter. In Trinity church Holy communion at six o'clock in the morning. Prayer and Holy communion at 10:30, and Children's lestival at 3 p. m., were the only services. At Christ church Easter communion at 6 a. m. Communion at 10:30, and children's festival were conducted in the forenoon. No special music service was rendered At 3 p. m. Easter service was held by the Janesville Commandery No. 2. Knights Templar, Rev. Mr. Pullen acting as prelate. These services were well attended.

There were several choice floral offerings at Court street church that graced the pulpit platform. The pastor, the Rev. Olin A. Curus, delivered an excellent sermon on "Our Lord's triumph over death." Music was made a prominent feature of the service, and a double quartet was provided for the occasion. In the song service, were rendered, Anthem-"Christ Our Passover"—Chappelle; Easter Anthem, arranged from Mozart, Spirit of Love Divine,"-More, a solo by Mr. W. Biaden, and three hymns, the services being closed with "Coronation."

Easter-the feast of the Resurrection of Christ, is always a day of great joyfulness in the Catholic church; and this joy is manifested in many different ways, all of which have a significant meaning. In St. Patrick's church, the main altar was beautifully decorated, and three masses were celebrated. At first mass there were many communicants, besides the members of the Young Men's Sodality, who made an edifying appearance, by approaching Holy Communion in a body. Rev. Father Brenan preached an appropriate sermon, and advised the forming of good resolutions, and to enter in spirt into the meaning of the day, to guide our actions. The last mass was a solemn high mass; the music in keeping with the day, and Easter at St. Patrick's, was joyful indeed. St. Mary's church was not lacking in calebrating the great; feast. The altar was made bright and beautiful with candles and flowers; an effective sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Roche; the music was good, and the services were of the nature of Easter, joyful.

No special services were held in the other churches, but the services in each were largely attended.
